

Manufacturers Needed for Urgent Critical Supplies

The Manufacturing Extension Partnership (MEP) National Network has created a direct channel to the the White House for all manufacturers who are able to help out by producing critical supplies.

If your manufacturing environment has any role or capability to make critical components, supplies or equipment that support the healthcare, medical, and related industries on the frontlines of the COVID-19 crisis, we strongly encourage you to reach out to our team directly so we can offer immediate support and help you connect with the correct resources nationally, and within the Commonwealth.

If your company can help with the critical supply chain, please click below to send an email with the information listed.

A letter from NWIRC President, Bob Zaruta

There is so much uncertainty that exists during this unprecedented and challenging time. The level of uncertainty, anxiousness, and stress that results, will test all of us for the unforeseeable future. The mindset that we're all in this together helps us to cope during this crisis. But more is needed. I want you to know that NWIRC is here to help. The most prevailing core value we endear, that drives and guides us, is the genuine caring feelings our staff has for your organization's well-being and that of your employees. I can tell you that from our frontline, our staff including Susan Hileman, Tom Weible, Lisa Pustelak, and Andy Idzik, as well as our support staff, we are here for you. We want to help, continue to be a resource, and support your needs. Know that we will do our best to provide pertinent information and stay connected without being burdensome to you and your organization.

Please keep in touch with us regarding any needs you may have with your own supply chain, other challenges, or your need for information. We have created a website resources page that we are updating on a regular basis. Don't hesitate to call upon us!
